HARRISBURG, July 11—Another effort being made to acquaint the public with the truth concerning the operation of the Works Progress Administration in Pennsylvania was started yesterday in the State Senate.

A resolution, proposing a new and modified investigation of charges that the Federal Works Relief unit has compelled unemployed persons to surrender their freedom of political belief in order to receive aid, was offered from the Republican side of the Senate.

The proposal for a new inquiry seeks to avoid the pitfalls by which the Senate's original investigation of WPA was ordered halted on legal technicalities in a decision Tuesday by Federal Judge Albert W. Johnson at Lewisburg.

Senator G. Mason Owlett, Tioga, who had been chairman of the original WPA inquiry, offered the resolution for appointment of a new committee of five Senators by President Pro Tem John G. Homsher.

Steering around the obstacle which blocked the first investigating committee, Owlett's new resolution specifies the new investigators shall not have power to subpoena Federal officials or Government records. It proposes the new probe's chief attention shall center upon receiving testimony in support of charges that WPA workers are required to submit to Democratic political coercion.

In two other ways the revised investigation seeks to avoid delays by legalistic tactics for obstruction, such as hampered the first probe. It extends the life of the committee and its investigating powers until the 1937 legislative session; while the original inquiry would have ended with the current special session. It also provides that if any Court holds the committee has no power to subpoena witnesses when the Senate is not in session the committee shall continue to have power to hear voluntary witnesses.

The original inquiry, begun May 18, had been in progress only two weeks when it was halted by a restraining order by Judge Johnson, upon application of WPA Administrator Edward N. Jones, who was represented in court by attorneys of the Department of Justice sent into court by the Roosevelt Administration.

The restraining order was followed on Tuesday by an injunction which prevented the committee "from conducting any investigation." The terms even barred hearing witnesses who volunteered to present testimony.

The new investigation was proposed, rather than appealing from the injunction, upon advice of former U. S. Senator George Wharton Pepper and former State Attorney General William A. Schnader, counsel for the old committee.

The resolution explains that evidence gathered in the short life of the first inquiry makes it necessary that additional testimony be gathered.

"The work of the committee prior to the issuance of a restraining order," the resolution says, "had revealed gross abuses in the functioning of the Works Progress Administration in Pennsylvania, and particularly an effort by those controlling the Works Progress Administration unlawfully and unconstitutionally to interfere with the freedom of the electors of Pennsylvania to register and vote as they please, and to impose upon persons in need of work relief an unlawful and unconstitutional requirement that they register as members of a particular political party.

"It is necessary in order that appropriate remedial legislation may be enacted, that the Senate obtain further information relating to these

CONVINCED THE BRITISH
LANDS ARE ENDANGEREDStatesmen of Empire Reconsidering Their Far-Flung Strategy

CONTEMPLATE BASES

By Sewell Rogers
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent

LONDON, July 11—(INS)—Convicted British communications and lands are endangered by belligerent, ambitious rivals, statesmen of the Empire are reconsidering their far-flung imperial strategy and may answer any threats from Italy or Japan by a chain of great sea and air bases.

This fact was evident today as a result of the visit here of Oswald Pirow, South African defense minister, who came to London—not by coincidence—just after Premier Mussolini's conquest of Ethiopia.

It is likewise significant that London and Australia have been in constant contact ever since Japan became enraged over Australian tariff increases.

The contemplated chain of sea and air bases consists of:

Singapore in the Far East.

Capetown at the southern tip of Africa.

Cyprus in the Mediterranean.

Pirow, who has been consulting Prime Minister Baldwin, Defense Minister Sir Thomas Inskip and Dominion Secretary Malcolm MacDonald, has informed them of South African worries over the shadow of the Fascist Black Shirt on imperial sea and air communications down the East African coast.

Singapore already has become the "world's greatest sea fort." A naval base is being built there at a cost of $40,000,000. Millions more are being spent on an air station and army garrison.

Work on the naval base has been underway for eight years. It has the second largest graving dock in the world, capable of handling the largest battleships. It also has a floating dock costing $3,500,000, half a mile of

SAVE AMERICA NOW

By Representative Ralph E. Church of Illinois

A relatively small group of men, original New Dealers, control the Democratic Party. With the whip of patronage and the power to grant or to withhold work-relief funds, the "Brain Trusters" have forced a supine Congress to yield to every dictate. We have had a New Deal Congress masquerading under an old party name.

True Democrats, as distinguished from these New Dealers, believe with the Republicans in the American theory of abundance and the principles of a free government. While historically the two great parties have differed as to means, nevertheless until the advent of the New Deal, both parties zealously sought to advance the principles of democracy and to make America the land of plenty.

The New Dealers believe in an economy of scarcity, with a system of state capitalism whereby all of us are regulated, regimented and controlled by the bureaucrats in Washington. Because this smacks of the Russian theory of controlled production and consumption, they will deny that they are giving adherence to a principle so entirely foreign to America. But "by their deeds ye shall know them."

As a remedy to the farm problem, the New Deal inaugurated a program of crop destruction and limitation of production, yet thousands of families still are wondering where to obtain their next loaf of bread. Control of production has been applied to industry. No effective efforts have been made to encourage industry to increase production and to re-employ.

The New Deal is wholly un-American. Instead of encouraging thrift, it encourages indolence and waste. Instead of encouraging economy, it encourages spending. When you look beneath the camouflage you find that the New Dealers are not only luring people away from American principles of government, but are leading to bankruptcy and destruction.

With an orgy of spending there has been no appreciable decrease in the number of unemployed. The A. F. of L. has estimated that 12,184,000 people are without jobs. The relief problem remains with us—nor can we expect otherwise until industry revives. And we certainly cannot expect this when we force industry to face the continued threat of ever increasing taxes or inflation.

The choice which we have to make is not a choice between Democrats and Republicans. It is a choice between New Deal state capitalism in an economy of scarcity—and Republican adherence to a free democracy in an economy of abundance. It is a choice between debts, taxes, inflation and fear on the one hand—and on the other, industry, thrift, freedom and true security.

BUGLE CORPS ON HAND

Two Bristol champions will strut their stuff at the Philadelphia National League ball park tomorrow afternoon. The Robert W. Bracken Post Junior baseball team, winner of the Bucks-Montgomery competition, will tangle with the winner of the Philadelphia competition, at 3.30, and the State champion Bugle Corps is going along to whoop things up for the boys and show the city folks some fancy drilling and music.

Due to the surprising win by the Oxley Post Juniors over the favored McCall Post team, yesterday afternoon, those two teams are now tied. The rubber game will be played this afternoon and the winner will be Bristol's opponent.

Manager Bobby Hems' crew have nine victories out of ten starts to their credit and they expect to continue their winning habits at the Phillies Park tomorrow. Hems saw the Philadelphia boys play yesterday and he came home with a broad and confident grin.

TOONERVILLE TROLLEY

YARDLEY, July 11—An aged resident of this borough, who died recently, Elmer E. Guy, is said to have contributed much to Fontaine Fox's inspirations for his cartoons "The Toonerville Trolley."

Mr. Guy for many years was a motorman, and operated "The Toonerville Trolley" on a 2½ mile stretch from Kenilworth to Aldene, Union County.

The Public Service Co-ordinated Transport substituted buses for the trolley 10 years ago and Mr. Guy became a switch tender, but during the past few years he had been retired from the traction field and lived with relatives in this borough. He was born in Morrisville, and became a motorman in Elizabeth, but it was on the Aldene-Kenilworth run that he reached the peak of his fame. His car was an ancient wooden conveyance, painted yellow, with long benches along each side, providing about 30 seats. On a busy day, however, Mr. Guy would pack in twice that number of passengers on some trips.

A heavy man of medium height, with florid complexion and light reddish hair, he stood on his operator's platform in a dopping dark blue uniform with brass buttons and muttered to his passengers that they were too slow getting on, too slow getting off, too "ornery" in their demands for service and "durned" if he would ever wait for them again even if they yelled their heads off.

But he never left a passenger at the siding and women who lived in houses along the route found out that they could call out: "Oh, Mr. Guy, coming right away," then put on the hats and scamper 200 feet to the waiting trolley.

During the World War a munitions plant was set up at Kenilworth and dozens of munitions workers used his car. They swarmed into it through windows and doors, jamming every inch until it seemed its sides must burst and when, finally, it was creaking under its load, Mr. Guy standing in majestic disdain on his front platform, turned around and announced to his passengers that he would not move until every last one of them had come

MUDDY DELAWARE DOESN'T DETER ANXIOUS BATHERSThose Seeking Relief Glad To Find Anything That Looks Like Water These Days

ALL TYPES OF COSTUMES

The deep chocolate color of the Delaware River does not deter those who wish relief from the blistering heat, from bathing these days. That those who most of the time are "rawther" particular about the conditions under which they bathe, join the masses when the mercury hits 100 in the shade, is shown by a survey of the numerous bathing beaches in and around Bristol these days.

Young and old, rich and poor, all creeds and nationalities are truly "sisters under the skin" when the sun shows her stuff, and she has been doing it for the past few days.

Bristol, not nearly as particular as some of her near or more-distant neighbors, is not insistent about the type of costume for bathing, or where it is worn, and the bather and spectator alike find it a revelation to visit the numerous beaches. An old dress or old undersuit does just as well as the most modern bathing suit; and should the men lack shirts it doesn't matter at all. As far as dressing rooms are concerned, clumps of bushes are used at the canal in Green Lane, and at many other points hereabouts probably. Knotted bundles of shirts, trousers, hosiery and shoes can be spotted hither and yon, as the owners disport themselves in the cooling waters.

A survey of some of the beaches here yesterday afternoon, when the mercury was at its height for the day showed 200 in the canal to the rear of the Grand Theatre; 100 at Maple Beach; 100 in the canal at Green Lane; a few dozen at the foot of each street ending at the river; several scores at Harriman Beach; and three at the Bristol Beach Club.

The mud and sand of the river, kept in turmoil because of dredging activities, does not prevent those seeking an hour or so of coolness, even though the hand can not be seen a few inches beneath the surface of the water.

Diving, the plain or fancy variety, and with or without the official type of board; duckings, forced and voluntary; contests to determine which youngster can stay under water the longest—all such are in order these days, and young Bristol and old Bristol proceeds to keep cool and enjoy itself.

There are bathers with suits in all colors of the rain-bow; some with caps, others minus such; those who can swim, and the more timid souls. Parents and grandparents, children and grandchildren—all find a few minutes, or a few hours these torrid days to gain a refreshing and inexpensive bit of fun.

Sun-tanned and sun-burned arms and legs are seen as the youngsters and adults flit in and out of the water. Canoes are practically deserted these days in favor of actually being in the water. Some have resorted to sail-boats in an effort to capture a stronger breeze.

Pajamas, inner-tube, and soap, towels, dogmas, and beach robes, the old-fashioned water wings and balls, accompany the bathers and swimmers to the beach these days, each adding to the fun and comfort. But all ball games on beaches were called off yesterday, with "catches" occurring only when the players were partly submerged in the cooling liquid.

The clubs, which have homes along the Delaware River here, found many bathers at their rear doors, throughout the day and evening. Burlington Island was dotted with bright-clad bathers, who tried to forget the sand and instead felt the water which trickled about their limbs and bodies.

STAINED-GLASS WINDOW
DAMAGED BY WIND-STORMBlown from Rear of St. Ann's
Church During High Wind
Last Evening

SCORCHER AGAIN TODAY

Another "scorcher" is in store for this section today, according to the weather man, who predicts but little change in temperature.

Yesterday the mercury climbed to the top of many thermometers and readings throughout the section showed temperatures as high as 104 and 110.

The severe wind storm of last night blew a large stained-glass window out of the rear of St. Ann's Italian Catholic Church, Dorrance and Pond streets. The window was a large one and located in the top of the rear of the edifice. It is believed that a back draft was the cause of the window giving way. The glass and most of the large frame were sent crashing to the ground. Fortunately no one was passing at the time.

Bristol Consolidated Fire Department was called and worked for several hours, fastening tarpaulins over the open space, so as to prevent damage to the interior of the church, should there be a heavy rain storm. The firemen had to use long extension ladders and then climb into the loft of the building. Long ropes were fastened to the tarpaulins and then these were taken through the lower windows and fastened on the inside of the church.

Building Sound-Proof

Master Masons, a Philadelphia contracting firm, is doing the work.

BRISTOL WOMAN
WRITES HER WILL
ON SLIP OF PAPERMrs. Mary E. Scull Disposes of
Her Estate Valued at $1,400.00

SON IS THE EXECUTOR

Caveat is Filed in the Estate of Former Parkland
Man

DOYLESTOWN, July 11—In a will written on a mere fragment of paper Mrs. Mary E. Scull, Bristol, disposed of an estate valued at $1400. She directed that her son, William F. Scull, who is also the executor, should be the sole heir.

The will, executed on a piece of stationery, which bears several columns of figures, was made July 29, 1929, by the testatrix in her own handwriting which is very faint.

In the original document, Mary Gretzinger, of Trumbauersville, who also left an estate of $3500, left her husband, Henry, a bequest of $100. Three grandchildren will each receive $100 apiece and a son, Charles W. Brunner, and grandchild, Clara Brunner, will share the residue of the estate.

In a codicil, written February 4, 1934, the testatrix revoked the bequest concerning her husband because of his death. The personal estate was valued at $1500 and real estate holdings totaled $2000.

Because of her kindness, Esther C. Shelmire, who was also named executrix, will share the residue of the $1000 estate of Lillie C. Shelmire, of Upper Southampton, after a brother and sister inherit ten per cent of the estate apiece.

The $800 personal estate of Elizabeth M. Potter, this place, was bequeathed to Stanley W. Root and Elizabeth Root and is to be used toward educating their two sons, according to the will probated here.

A daughter, Catherine V. Strausbaugh, 129 Main street, Sellersville, will inherit the $5000 personal estate of Kate V. Strausbaugh, Sellersville.

The $2000 estate of William Toon, Perkasie, will be inherited by his widow, Annie M. Toon. Esther Toon was named executrix.

Letters of administration in the estate of Anna Salinda Scheid, of Quakertown, were granted to Charles E. Scheid, amounting to $1950. A husband and son are the heirs.

In the estate of Joseph K. Taylor of Newtown, letters of administration were granted to Edna May Ringel, amounting to $25. Five children are the heirs.

Doylestown National Bank & Trust Company was named the executor in the estate of Hannah Leatherman of Plumstead, who left an estate of $1100. A son, three grandchildren and four nephews and nieces, whose addresses are unknown, are his heirs.

Letters of administration in the estate of Oscar Rice, of this place, were granted to the Doylestown Trust Company, amounting to $3000. His widow is the heir.

In the estate of John Allen, of Haycock, letters of administration were granted to Clara S. Allen, amounting to $10,000 personal, and $4,000 real estate. His widow, a sister and brothers' children are the heirs.

Letters of administration in the estate of Andrew J. Hibbs, of Bristol, were granted to George Molden, amounting to $6700. A brother and eight other relatives are the heirs.

Amy B. Bothwell was granted the letters of administration in the estate of Lewis D. Bothwell, of Newtown, amounting to $500. A mother and two brothers are the heirs.

WHITE ELEPHANTS PLAY ST. ANN'S NINE TO TIE

Another deadlock took place in the Bristol Twilight League last night. Playing on the Bath Road diamond, the White Elephants and the St. Ann's A. A. team finished in a 4-4 tie. The game was called by Umpire Joe Kervick at the ending of the fifth inning because of threatening rain.

The Saints outthrew the Elephants, 9-6, but were lucky enough to receive the break in the fifth which enabled them to deadlock the count. In this frame, Stallone singled, went to second on a passed ball and scored on Tosti's hit to right. Tosti went out trying for second.

Until the fourth, the Hughesmen held a 4-1 advantage as the result of spurts on Scordia in the second and third innings. Scordia was relieved by Whyno in the third with two out. Bill Hart pitched for the White Elephants. Line-up:

HULMEVILLE TO PLAY ONE GAME OVER WEEK-END

Hulmeville A. A. is scheduled for but one game over the week-end, meeting the Morrisville Hoopers at Hulmeville. The game between Hulmeville and Bordentown will be played at a later date.

The Hulmevillites lost two close games last week, 11-10 and 7-6. In both games it was faulty fielding which caused the downfall of the Blackmen. It is most likely that either Howard Black or Pete Firce will toe the slab against the Undertakers with Kleinfelder taking the hill for the visitors.

Tomorrow is the closing date for the signing of players for the second half race and the fans are resting their eyes on the Hulmeville team to see if any new players will be secured.

R. D. WOOD NINE TO PLAY HERE TOMORROW

Tomorrow, at Landreth Ball Park, the Landreth's Seeds will meet the R. D. Wood team of Florence. More than usual interest is centered in this game owing to the fact that on two previous occasions the Foundrymen have defeated the "Farmers" and each time by one run, and that in the last inning.

Big "Bill" Everham, who twice rescued mountsmen and saved the game for his team, will no doubt be called upon to start the game for the Jersey-men.

"Jake" Praul, who has not worked against the visitors this season, will probably be used by Manager Landreth.

Florence has defeated the Bacarach Giants, 9-0, and the Pittsburgh Crawfords, 6-3, since meeting Landreth's. May 31st, playing here, they won, 8-7; while at Florence, June 5th, they again were victors, 6-5.

Stained-Glass Window Damaged By Wind-Storm

Numerous signs and tree limbs were blown down, but very little rain fell in Bristol.

Poultry raisers throughout Bucks County are suffering severe losses due to the excessive heat.

The mortality among the chickens as the result of the intense heat wave was very high, and the poultrymen were kept busy from early morning until late in the evening looking after their chickens.

All of the more extensive chicken raisers in the county reported losses and, after having gone through that experience on Thursday, they are taking precautions to prevent a further loss.

From information received from numerous poultrymen this morning, indications seemed to be that the heavier breed of chickens suffered most.

Poultrymen also seemed to be of the opinion that the intense heat will cause a let-down on the egg production.

Many of the poultrymen, finding their chickens prostrated by the heat, either ducked them in tubs of water or sprayed them and as a result the mortality was kept down to some degree. At Belle Mead Farm, Fairview Lane, six chickens have succumbed, evidently from the heat.

One of the more extensive poultrymen, J. L. Sayre, residing near Doylestown, suffered the loss of no less than 150 New Hampshire Red laying pullets. Many of these were quartered in the free range shelters near the hatchery, in which places they sought shelter from the burning rays of the sun. Although they were protected to some degree from the sun, many of them without a moment's warning toppled over, stretched out and died.

Fortunately, Mr. Sayre and his helpers were able to revive a number of them by carrying them to a building with a cement floor, where they were sprayed.

David C. Cole, in the upper part of the county and who specializes in the growing of White Leghorns, reported this morning that he lost about 24 chickens out of a flock of 2000. A representative of the Cole farm said this morning that in former years they have experienced the loss of laying hens, but that this was the first year that they lost laying pullets on account of the heat.

Silas VanHorn, Wrightstown, who also specializes in Leghorns, reported a comparatively small loss this morning. Out of a flock of approximately 3500 he lost about 10 chickens.

Norman Kriebel, residing near the Sayre hatchery, near Doylestown, reported the loss of about 8 out of a flock of 1100 pullets. Chickens on free range, it was learned at this place, will not suffer as much as those closely confined to quarters.

Herbert M. Leatherman, Cross Keys near Doylestown, reported the loss of 62 hens.

Clarence Derstine, Doylestown township, reported the loss of at least 12 New Hampshire Reds. Finding a number of them prostrated and seeing that they could not recover, Mr. Derstine killed a number of them. Others stricken were drenched with water.

Daniel Hestand, residing in the Pine Run section of Doylestown township, reported this morning the loss of at least 22 hens of the Rhode Island Red and White Rock varieties.

Paul R. Gross, Isaac R. Myers and Mr. Moore, all living in the Pine Run section of Doylestown township, also were reported to have lost chickens.

Not only did the poultrymen have troubles of their own on account of the heat, but other persons engaged in general farming found they had to retard their work. Horses geared to the heavy reaping and binding combines had to be given rests at frequent intervals and the farmers had to take time out themselves to mop the brow.

Isaac S. Gross, Plumsteadville, reported the loss of five chickens. Thermometers in the shade at his place registered as high as 102 degrees and at one place in Plumsteadville thermometers registered 104 degrees.

Although he has very few pigs, Mr. Gross pointed out this morning that the heat was very hard on them, especially the fat sows.

In order to save some of his fowls, a Buckingham farmer on Thursday afternoon resorted to throwing water on the chickens and wetting them beneath their wings.

Deceased Yardley Man Cartoon Inspiration

up and dropped the nickel fare in the box.

Among the many fables that arose about Mr. Guy was that he owned a tremendous block of Public Service stock and that even Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, couldn't fire him.

Mr. Guy probably had a lasting effect on traction economies and operations, for his trolley was one of the first one-man cars in the East, and it is said that he pointed the way for operation of street cars with one man combining the functions of motorman and conductor.

For all his muttering at his passengers Mr. Guy was enormously interested in the welfare of his neighbors and years ago, before the Spanish beetle invaded North New Jersey, he brought a half-dozen specimens of the pest back home from a trip to the southern part of the State and gave them to a newspaperman who was his friend.

Mr. Guy also was a useful news source for his reporter friends, for over the clanking of his car and the drone of his passengers' voices bits of conversation would drift up to his front platform about some sale of property or the proposed erection of a new factory in the community, and he would pass the word along.

Almost every idiosyncratic operator of an eccentric trolley car has been held up in his locality as the original of the motorman in the "Toonerville Trolley," but Mr. Fox drew his inspiration entirely from no one man.

When Mr. Fox worked for The Louisville Herald there was a belt line in Louisville which was the butt of everyone's jests with its equipment consisting of the most ancient cars and its operators, naturally, the most ancient motormen. Mr. Fox and his managing editor started a campaign to replace it. They used its actual designation, the Brook street car, and it was not until after Mr. Fox had come to New York that he created his "Toonerville Trolley" feature.

The cartoonist went up to Pelham

one day to visit a friend. An engaging old motorman stood by his rickety street car outside the Pelham railroad station. The passengers climbed aboard the trolley, but the motorman stood outside, waiting for something. At last he climbed on his platform and started off, announcing, to no one in particular:

"I guess Mr. Smith must have missed that train."

Mr. Fox did not know where his friend lived and none of the passengers could tell him, but the motorman volunteered the information. He stopped the car, alighted and led Mr. Fox to the top of a knoll, from which he pointed out the house the cartoonist was seeking. If any one man was the inspiration for the "Toonerville Trolley" series he was probably the Pelham motorman, but the saga of the Toonerville pilot grew from stories of many of the clan.

In his younger days Mr. Guy was so ambitious to gain an education that he walked daily from his home in this borough to Trenton and return while he earned a diploma at the old State Normal School.

During part of that time he engaged in the raising of bees to aid in the raising of funds with which to complete his educational course. During his high school course at this place he once encountered a rather grouchy school master who during a heated argument over arithmetic banged Mr. Guy's head against the blackboard. As Guy drew back he saw a crack in the board which he had not noticed before and ever after he insisted that his head had done the damage, due to the vigor of the educator's shove.
